

Electrical power lines were not designed to carry broadband signals so it makes no sense to field such a technology. There are other methods of delivering broadband signals that do not cause harmful interference and are just as economical such as broadband Wireless Access.